MEDAL COMMEMORATING THE VISIT OF
H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE UNITED STATES
NOVEMBER, MCMXIX

DESIGNED BY JOHN FLANAGAN

MEDAL COMMEMORATING THE VISIT OF
H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE UNITED STATES • NOVEMBER, MCMXIX

The gold medal illustrated on the foregoing page has just been presented to the Prince of Wales. It is fitting and proper that his visit to our country should be commemorated in medal-form. The medal has been designed by John Flanagan, one of the best of our American sculptors.

The obverse bears a portrait of the Prince in profile with his crest in the field. The inscription reads EDWARD PRINCE OF WALES. The portrait is a very successful one.

On the reverse is shown the welcoming figure of Columbia. The inscription reads COMMEMORATING THE VISIT OF H. R. H. THE PRINCE OF WALES TO THE UNITED STATES, NOVEMBER, MCMXIX. The field is occupied by two branches of oak, the oak being one of the national emblems of Great Britain.

When the Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward VII, visited this country in 1861 he planted two trees in Central Park. One of these trees was an oak, the other an elm. It has been possible to obtain a portion of this elm, and from it a case was made in which the gold medal mentioned above was presented.

This medal is offered for subscription to the membership of The American Numismatic Society and the Mayor's Committee for the Reception of Distinguished Visitors. The price for the silver medal has been fixed at ten dollars and that of the bronze at five. This subscription will remain open until January 1st, 1920, after which copies will not be struck except in filling orders from abroad which did not reach the Society during the period of publication. Subscriptions, stating the number desired in each metal, accompanied by cheques to the order of The American Numismatic Society should be addressed to The American Numismatic Society, Broadway and 156th Street, New York, N. Y.

Dec 2, 1919 Dear Mr. Noy

If The Prince of Wales comes to the U.S. or even any part of America, I want a medal struck in honour of His visit. The medal to be issued by The American Humane Society, and I will donate the amount required by the artist, the diesinker, and for one gold medal to be presented to "The Prince" and six silver medals for the Society in so as they see fit with. It will perhaps be well, as a matter of form for me to make a deposit of $1000.00 ten dollars. As regards the artist who is to make the medal, I leave that to the Society, only I would like to say that it is important it should be given to the Prince, while He is here, not sent to Europe after He has sailed away.

Now this requires speed in the making of the medal. I only know one artist who can do such work, good work, in a very short time, and that's Victor D. Brenner.

Yours most truly

J. Shepard Nelson

Dear Mr. Flanagan:-

I had a talk to-day with our President, Mr. Nevell. He has instructed us to have a cheque drawn to your order and sent to Mr. Wood for delivery to you as soon after Saturday next, as Mr. Well is able to assure us that the medals for the Prince of Wales Medal are in his hands.

I trust this will be satisfactory to you.

Very respectfully yours,

Secretary.

Dear Mr. Gilliss:-

I am enclosing herewith prints and copy for a circular for the Prince of Wales medal, which I should like to have you prepare. Owing to the difficulty of securing envelopes I feel that it would be wise to adapt the size of the circulars to envelopes we have on hand. I enclose an envelope such as we shall use, and would suggest the arrangement of the obverse and reverse of the medal so that they will not be interfered with by the folding line. I have no strong preference as to color of paper or outward form of the folder but should think that in view of the briefness of the text, it might be well to use our small seal as was done with the Independence Day medal.

Very respectfully yours,

Secretary.

Dear Sir:-

I am informed by Mr. Redman Warriner that he has transmitted to you my request to be informed of the membership of the Empire's Committee for the Reception of Distinguished Guests. This is desired in connection with the medal which our Society has prepared for presentation to the Prince of Wales during his coming visit. May I respectfully ask whether this request has reached your hands?

Very respectfully yours,

Secretary.

New York.

Dear Sir,

I am to inform you that H.R.H. The Prince of Wales has signified his pleasure in accepting the medal which you so kindly offered to present to him, and that the following arrangements will be made for the presentation ceremony:-

1. The presentation will take place at 3.30 p.m. on Tuesday November 18th on board H.M.S. Renown in North River.
2. The delegation which presents the medal must be limited to 5 persons and no-one other than that number can be taken on board.
3. The party will rendezvous at the landing at 83rd Street (just off Riverside Drive) at 2.45 p.m. on Tuesday November 18th whence they will proceed under arrangements to be made by the Captain of H.M.S. Renown.
4. Dress is optional.
5. The presentation ceremony must not take more than seven minutes.

Will you please let me know the names of the 5 persons who will compose the delegation; who will actually present the medal, and (if possible) the gist of the remarks which he will make. It is hoped that these arrangements will meet with the approval of the American Numismatic Society, and the Military Attache would be glad to hear from you by return mail if possible.

Yours sincerely,

Captain D. C. Wallace,
The British Military Mission,
44 Whitehall St., London.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of November 13th, informing me of the arrangements which have been made for presenting the medal which has been prepared by The American Sociological Society. The plans as outlined are all that we could wish, and will be referred to by our delegation at the time of the medal presentation.

The Committee to make the presentation will be composed of Mr. Edward T. Newell, President of the American Sociological Society, John Feilly, Jr. and Henry Russell Brown of the Board of Governors, and Mr. William H. Wadlin (or substitute) and Dr. W. Gilman Thompson (or substitute) of the Society. Mr. Newell wishes me to indicate that there will be merely a brief and informal speech of appreciation which will keep well within the limit of the time indicated.

In the event that Mr. Wadlin and Dr. Thompson are unable to accept their appointment by Mr. Newell for this ceremony, I will inform you of the names of those who will take their places on the committee. Should it come to further information desired, you may reach me by telephone (Austonia 2124) at any time before five o'clock tomorrow. With cordial appreciation of your courtesy, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Sir:-

Referring again to your letter of November 15th and in connection with my reply of the next day, I beg to advise that the Committee of The American Paedagogic Society appointed to make presentation to H.R.H., the Prince of Wales, of the medal commencing his visit will be as indicated with the exception of one member. This Committee as now constituted will consist of President Edward T. Russell, Messrs. John Seilly, Jr., Henry Russell Spence, Marshall E. Callaghan and Dr. W. Gilman Thompson.

Very sincerely yours,

Secretary.

City Editor,

The New York Post.

Dear Sir:-

On several occasions you have very kindly given some attention to the medals published by The American Numismatic Society, and I am sending you herewith a photograph of the medal which was presented to the Prince of Wales on board H. M. S. Renown this afternoon. From the accompanying circular you will be able to obtain such information regarding the medal as you may need. The paragraph describing the coin made from an elm tree planted by the grandfather of the present Prince of Wales will probably catch the popular attention.

The Committee which presented the medal consisted of Edward T. Newell, President of the American Numismatic Society, John Reilly Jr., Henry Russell Brown, Harrold E. Gillingham of Philadelphia, and Dr. W. Gilman Thompson.

With appreciation for favors shown us in the past, I am,

Yours very sincerely,

Secretary.

Memorandum for file.

On December 2nd two bills were sent to Mr. Saltus, one ($180.) dated August 6th, the other dated December 2nd ($1380.60). After mailing these I discovered that Mr. Saltus had sent a cheque for $250.00 to cover the gold membership medal for the Queen of Belgium (the actual cost of which was $203.60, reckoned by Mr. Saltus as $204. even). I therefore wrote to Mr. Saltus asking him to deduct the $250. he had sent from the amount of these two bills ($180 plus 1380.60 equals $1560.60. $1560.60 minus $250. equals $1310.60 or as Mr. Saltus drew his cheque for $1311.). This $1311. paid for the Prince of Wales items on the bill, for the Peace Medal items in full and by the inclusion of the $46. credit, which was the difference between the cheque advanced and the cost of the Queen of Belgians Medal, the I. D. M. Account.

The invoice of December 2nd however was in error in that it did not include the cost of the dies for the Prince of Wales Medal, which Mr. Saltus had volunteered to pay, ($175.), and under date of June 28th a letter was sent to Mr. Saltus acquainting him with this fact.

Edward, Prince of Wales, will cross the Canadian border into the United States tomorrow, to be met by Secretary of State Robert Lansing and escorted to Washington. A week from today, he will begin his New York for a five-day visit. Announcement to this effect was received last night by Mayor Hylan.

In connection with the issuing of a complete program of the Prince's stay in this city, the Mayor's Committee on Diplomatic Events, of which Rodman W. Loring is Chairman, gave out this copy of a telegram sent by Secretary Lansing.

"The Honorable, the Mayor, New York:
"As his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, has expressed the desire to visit your city, it will be appreciated if you can extend an invitation through the Secretary of State to him, to be the guest of your city. I am congratulating the Governor of New York on his knowledge of this fact and asking him to co-operate with you, and trust that you will send you by mail of the personnel of the royal party and their suites and the officers of the United States Government who will accompany them.

"ROBERT LANSING,
"Secretary of State."

The program by the committee planned for the royal visitor is as follows:

Tuesday, Nov. 13.

11:30 A. M.—Arrive at Jersey City from Washington and to meet by Commissioner Washington and other members of the committee. From this point the party will be escorted to Pier A at the Battery, disembarcation at 12:30 o'clock.

1:00 P. M.—City Hall, where the Prince will be officially received at the Aldermen's Reception by Mayor Hylan. Following this reception the Prince will be escorted to the Lincoln Tomb.

2:00 P. M.—Luncheon on board H. M. S. Renown, anchored in the North River off Battery Park.

3:00 P. M.—Dinner in honor of the Prince at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar W. Loring, on behalf of the former Mayor of New York, and association of the American people.

LANSING TO ESCORT WALES TO CAPITAL

Vice President Will Welcome Prince Tuesday—Dinners and Receptions Arranged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The Prince of Wales and his party will arrive in the United States at Rouses Point Monday evening, Nov. 12, and will be escorted to Washington.

Secretary Lansing will accompany the party to Washington. Vice President Marshall will meet the Prince as the representative of President Wilson.

The Prince will go immediately to the home of Perry Belmont, which has been set apart for him. Vice President Marshall will give a formal dinner in his honor there the same evening. The Prince will give a reception at Washington to his guests, and in the evening will dine informally with Secretary Lansing at the latter's home, after which a reception will be held in his honor in the Library of Congress.

Thursday afternoon the Prince of Wales will visit Mount Vernon, accompanied by the Vice President and Secretary Lansing. In the evening the British Embassy will give a dinner followed by a small reception. On Friday the Prince will visit Annapolis.

OTTAWA, Nov. 8.—A pang of regret that he could not meet all the Canadian girls who had written him "charming letters" was voiced by the Prince of Wales today in his farewell speech to the thousands gathered at a luncheon attended by more than 2,000 business and professional men and members of Parliament. The Prince also regretted that he had not been equipped with a dozen handkerchiefs to take care of all the hearty handshakes he had been offered.

After expressing gratitude for his welcome, the Prince closed with a declaration that a new epoch of Anglo-Canadian and that the British dominions were now sister nations to the motherland, equal parts of the empire.

WITHDRAWS FROM PARADA.

Port Chester Contractor Joins in Criticism of Young Women's Garb.

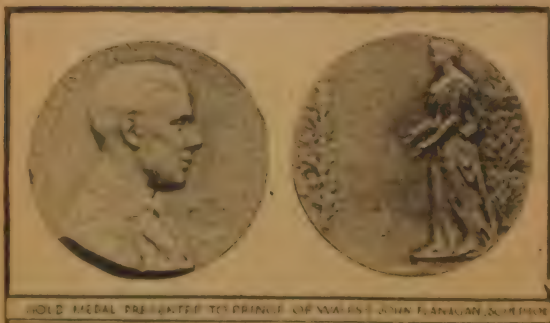

Special to The New York Times.

FRANK J. KINNEY, N. Y., Nov. 8.—The Rev. Harry B. Heald's denunciation of the parade for the Woman's Club benefit, came today when Frank J. Kinney, a New York contractor, living here, came out in support of the Rev. Mr. Heald. He said: "Having noticed my name in the published list of patrons of the parade, I have today requested Mrs. Chester A. Studwell, Patroness Committee Chairman, to remove by name. I have also advised the Rev. Mr. Heald of my act, stating I agree with him absolutely in the stand he has taken relative to the parade. Mr. Kinney's daughter, Miss Anna Kinney, is a member of the parade committee and will be in the parade."

At last night's meeting of the Board of Education, which has supervision over the auditorium where the parade is being given, Mrs. George M. Reynolds, the only woman member of the board, said that she considered the parade the most beautiful spectacle ever given in Port Chester. Fifteen hundred persons crowded into the Auditorium tonight to witness the concluding performance.

PRESENTS MEDAL TO PRINCE.

Numismatic Society Makes Gift to Royal Visitor.

A gold medal, commemorating his visit to the United States, has been presented to the Prince of Wales by the American Numismatic Society.

The gift was designed by John Flanagan. On the obverse is a portrait of the Prince in profile, with his name in the field. The inscription reads: "Edward Prince of Wales." On the reverse is shown the welcoming figure of George V. and the inscription reads: "Commemorating the Visit of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales to the United States, November, MCMXV." The field is covered by two signatures of oak.

The society's committee in the publication of coins drew attention to the fact that when King Edward VII., as Prince of Wales, visited this country, in 1891, he visited the towns in Central Park, and made and ate oysters. A portion of this was very interesting and caused a great deal of talk. The gold medal was presented.

New York Today.

AMERICAN MOUNTAINEERS, WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, N. H. — The Prince of Wales, who is here on a tour of the White Sulphur Springs resort, was today the double attraction of a Bishop preaching and a royal Prince as one of the worshippers.

When the Prince of Wales entered the edifice every seat, with the exception of those reserved for him and his suite, was occupied. Among the trees outside the church the red-tipped sentinels of the mountains, some were lined up the luxurious limousines of the resort's foreign visitors.

Early in the morning the Prince and his families gathered near the church to watch the Prince as he entered and left the building, but with the courtesy for which they are famous there was no attempt to crowd the royal visitor. From a considerable distance they watched silently his moving form whose path in life is so very different to their own and then drove off to their distant farm homes.

The sermon was preached by Bishop William L. Grant of West Virginia, who took for his text: "He set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem." The substance of the sermon was the necessity of every man, Prince or peasant, to have a purpose in life.

At the close of the service the Prince waited at the door of the church to greet the bishop, who surprised him by telling him that he had been introduced to him once before in London when the British heir was a boy of seven.

The afternoon was devoted to golf and on the links the Prince had his second introduction of the day, this time to a British colonel of the war, Private Charles Nelson of the Hampshire Fusiliers. Private Nelson remarked the Prince that he had fought with him at the battle of Guilford in the great British victory on the morning of the summer of 1862.

The Prince played his match with Sir Geoffrey Thomas, his natural secretary, but the main interest was centered on what was announced as the "hush championship" of the United States and Canada, played between Stephen, a tall of the Canadian Army, who is attached to the British staff and J. M. Nye, chief special agent of the United States State Department. Both claimed to be the best players on the continent and Nye won.

This evening the Prince attended a sacred concert in the hotel. The Prince will leave on his return to New York today. He is scheduled to arrive at the metropolis at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning.

PROGRAM COMPLETED FOR PRINCE'S WELCOME

City's Reception Committee Will Meet Him Tomorrow—Cere- monies at City Hall.

Richard Wansmoker, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Reception, to-day announced that there were a few changes in the itinerary of the Prince of Wales during his coming visit to New York, but that the main features of the program would remain as published in the newspapers on Sunday, Nov. 10. At 10 o'clock to-morrow morning the police boat patrol will tow the Mayor's barge, with the Mayor and all the members and guests of the Mayor's Reception Committee, which will meet the Prince of Wales on his arrival from Washington.

Among those on board with the Mayor Wansmoker, George A. Wharton, Commissioner of Parks and Streetways, Coleman du Pont, Lieut. Gov. Robert Lee Bellard, commander of the Department of the East; Rear Admiral James M. Glennon, commander of the Third Naval District; Major Gen. Israel C. Shanks and Major Gen. John F. O'Hearn, Henry P. Davison, Henry Claws, and Police Commissioner Mitchell.

The special train is due to arrive at 10:30 A. M. and after an informal reception on the platform in the city

Memorial Medal for Prince

American Sculptor Worked Three Months on Decoration by American Numismatists —Has Oak Leaf Design.

The medal presented to the Prince of Wales by the American Numismatic Society is the work of one of the best known American sculptors, John Flanagan of New York.

Mr. Flanagan, who is himself a member of the Numismatic Society, has been at work on the medal since June, it having required nearly three months to complete the design and an additional one for the casting of the die, which work was done by the Medallie Art Company of New York.

The gold medal presented to the Prince and the silver and bronze replicas offered for subscription to the membership of the Numismatic Society and the Mayor's Committee for the Reception of Distinguished Visitors are about two and a half inches in diameter. The reduction of the original plaques of a foot in diameter was accomplished by a mechanical process.

The obverse of the medal shows a profile portrait of the Prince and his crest with three plumes in the background. The motto "I serve" is Anglicized in accordance with the Prince's sentiment as expressed by his adoption of the surname of Windsor in place of his hereditary Germanic one. The inscription on this side of the medal reads, "Edward, Prince of Wales."

Links Grandfather's Visit.

The back or reverse side shows the figure of Columbia, also in profile, with arms outstretched to welcome the royal visitor. The background or field is occupied by two branches of oak leaves on either side and by the inscription, "Commemorating the visit of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales to the United States, November, MCMXIX," and by the device of the Numismatic Society, over which are imposed the initials A. N. S.

The oak leaf decoration was chosen as it is one of the national emblems of Great Britain and because it links the Prince's visit with that of his grandfather, King Edward VII., in 1861. At that time the then Prince of Wales planted two trees in Central Park, one of them an oak. From the other tree, an elm, a piece of wood was obtained and made into a case for the medal presented to the present Prince of Wales.

The medal was presented to Prince Edward on board H. M. S. Rendown yesterday by a committee of five from the Numismatic Society. The society was present at the ceremony, although not as a member of the presentation committee.

MEMORIAL MEDAL GIVEN TO THE PRINCE.

This decoration was given by the American Numismatic Society to the Prince of Wales, himself a numismatist of note.

WAR WORKERS MEET PRINCE AT DINNER

About him boomed and crashed the supreme effort at noise of the noisier of towns. From pavement, windows and roofs a million overstrained voices bade him welcome. Aerial bells, hundreds of whistles, the blare of a dozen bands and the booming of saluting cannon from the warships in the river combined with these voices in New York's greeting to her newest citizen.

A week ago the reception committee had planned every step and stage of the ceremonies to be used in ushering the young prince into the city from the landing at the Battery and the ceremony at City Hall, where he was made a "freeman of New York," up to the minute last night when the royal barge took the tired guest home to the battle-scarred Prince of the few hours

The Royal Smile

Prince of Wales

Sends Message to 'Fellow Citizens'

The Prince of Wales gave the following signed message to the New York newspapers last night.

"New York's welcome to me this morning was so much warmer than I had any reason to expect that it took me entirely aback, and I did not express my feelings at all adequately in the few words which I was able to speak at the City Hall. I am therefore delighted to have the opportunity of expressing my appreciation and gratitude directly to you gentlemen who represent the press. You can convey them to a vastly wider audience than my own voice could reach, and I am very grateful to you for offering to publish this message on my behalf.

"Greatly as I value the honor conferred on me this morning, when I was made a freeman of the City of New York, I was even more deeply touched by the speeches made in conferring it, and more particularly by the much too kind things said about myself by the Secretary of State and by Mr. Wanamaker, the chairman of your reception committee. Both were good enough to allude to my own very modest services in the war.

"I do not pretend to have done as much as any other junior officer at the front, and no one realizes more clearly than I how little any such service as mine was worth by comparison with that of the splendid men who sacrificed life and health that the democracy of the world might be safe. But my four years at the front did teach me to know my brother officers and men in the Allied forces on three different fronts, and I hope that our common service as comrades in arms in a splendid cause remains as valued a memory to them as it always will to myself. I shall value the beautiful flag presented to me to-day more particularly as a souvenir of what Mr. Hugo and Mr. Wanamaker said to me in that respect.

"Now that I am a New Yorker in my own right, I can tell you exactly what I think about New York. I am still a little bewildered by your greeting and I only know the city at present by one drive through your streets. But two things stand out very clearly in my mind from the crowd of first impressions which my first arrival made on me to-day.

"The first of these was the beauty and dignity of the towering skyline of the city as I came across the Passaic from Jersey City to the Hudson. I have naturally never seen anything like that before, and I am not saying to flatter my new fellow citizens when I say that it struck me as a splendid sight. I was conscious of this impression afterward as I drove under those towering buildings through your most busy streets.

"My second impression, an even greater one, for men and women appeal to me more than any scene or sights, was of a most warm and friendly welcome which followed me all through my drive in the city. I can only say that your greeting to-day has touched me very deeply and has intensified my hope that my first visit to New York may be by no means the last."

CROWDS ACCLAIM SMILING PRINCE AS "REGULAR FELLOW"

C., author of "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

Stepping forward to review lines of American soldiers, sailors and marines, the Prince was intercepted by thirty camera men. Smilingly, he posed with his staff.

Spectators Crowd Broadway.

"The skyline is most marvelous," he was heard to exclaim, as he stepped into a limousine with the Duke of Devonshire, his Chief of Staff. He cast a glance upward and saw from the high storied Whitehall Building a shower of ticker tape and torn papers. It was a new sort of welcome to him and he liked it. Battery Park held 10,000 cheering Americans. The city hall station, at Bowling Green was heavily lined with figures. The Custom House steps were crowded with people waving and shouting. Broadway was a surging mass as the procession swung into that canyon of buildings.

The crowds that stormed the Prince's ears with cries of hearty welcome saw a boy in a khaki uniform, pink of complexion, light of hair, slim of build, shy in manner and smiling a genial message that seemed to say, "Thanks, I'm just as glad about it as you are."

It was not crowd psychology that swept him into instant popularity, but that subtle something that is called personality. Three months ago The World correspondent wrote from St. John, N. B., "New York will fall in love with this lad." New York did.

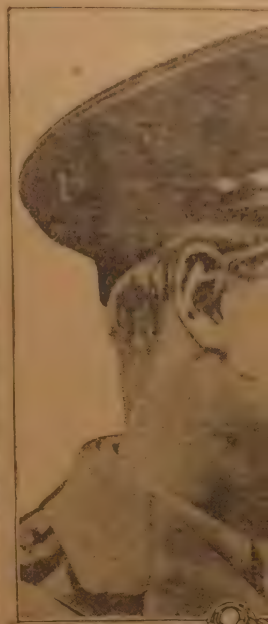

First he tried to make good his appreciation with bows, then with salutes of the right hand. Finally, as his horse passed, he had to stand with his hands clasped, bowing slightly and murmuring. The greeting did not stop when he reached City Hall, but sent him into the Aldermanic Chamber on a wave of enthusiasm. There he was given by Mayor Hylan freedom of the metropolis and named a "freeman of New York." Secretary of State Hughes made him welcome "as a fellow American."

Feels He Is No Stranger Here.

Prince Edward responded: "I am very proud indeed to have been made a freeman of the City of New York and thank you most warmly for the high honor which you have just conferred upon me. I feel much as a very happy comrade that I am a resident of this happy country, having been Albert, King of the Belgians, my radiant ally, to whose vision and courage in his glorious fight of peril our cause of freedom owes so much."

I do not feel a stranger in the United States or in New York. I already have many American friends before I came caught sight of the be-decked car in which the prince rode, with the royal standard of red, gold and blue aflutter in the wind of its passing, the valley seemed filled to the brim with sound.

A roar of voices that could almost be felt rose and scaled higher and then clung to a shrill hysterical pitch as the prince rode by behind the glittering bayonets of his escort. From skyscrapers paper scraps fell like blinding snow squalls. Ticker tape was tossed from high windows and fluttered down through the quivering air.

For a moment the lad, who had been listening to little else but greetings for the last two months, seemed dazed by the welcome New York was giving him. The bands ahead of him brayed manfully; they could not be heard.

Saluted by Police

Presently the very force of the racket seemed to draw the prince from his seat. For the rest of his journey to the City Hall he stood, his hand flashing again and again to the gold embroidered visor of his cap.

City Hall Park was set in a heavy frame of massed humanity as the cars of the welcoming party drove into the space kept clear in front of the hall itself. The police who guarded the steps came to salute as the prince jumped from his car and walked briskly up toward the portal. He grinned in a friendly fashion in the face of each rigid patrolman and returned every salute scrupulously.

In the Aldermanic Chamber all benches had been cleared away; a green carpet had been spread and the front of the gallery and the space behind the dais at the further end of the room were decorated with flags of America, Britain and the city.

There was a rattle of applause and a short burst of cheering as the prince entered, surrounded by officers and followed by members of the reception committee. On the dais he stood between Mayor Hylan and Rodman Wanamaker.

Made Citizen of New York

He was evidently nervous. His sleek head turned from one to the other of his neighbors; his slender hands were continually in motion, gripping each other; fumbling with the gleaming buttons of his uniform.

The Mayor intoned his address, in which he told the prince what America had done in the war, of the greatness of New York City, and of his pleasure in welcoming him. He then gave the prince the parchment bestowing upon him the rank of a citizen of New York.

Rodman Wanamaker and Secretary of State Hugo also spoke brief words of greeting, and then the prince replied. His voice was light, almost childish, but clear and true. With his fair face flushed and his slightly embarrassed manner, he looked rather like a little boy speaking at school exercises.

But the appeal of his manner caught the hearts of the crowd. Whenever he paused for breath they yelled approval. It was not so much what he said. They liked him and they wanted to hear him say more.

How New York City Will

Amuse Prince To-day

The revised program arranged for the Prince of Wales for to-day is as follows:

10 a. m.—Inspection guard of honor from the British Great War Veterans of America at the Columbia Yacht Club landing.

10:15 a. m.—Leaves the yacht club for a sight-seeing trip about the city.

10:45 a. m.—Woolworth Building.

11 a. m.—Trinity Church.

11:10 a. m.—New York Stock Exchange.

11:25 a. m.—Sub-Treasury.

11:35 a. m.—The Chamber of Commerce.

12:15 p. m.—Luncheon by Chamber of Commerce.

1:45 p. m.—Leaves Chamber of Commerce for the Academy of Music, in East Fourteenth Street.

2:45 p. m.—Arrives at the Horse Show, in Madison Square Garden.

7 p. m.—Attends dinner given by New York societies.

10 p. m.—Arrives at the home of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, at 451 Madison Avenue, where a ball is to be given in his honor.

to his face during the formal reception.

"It's been a great day and it is a wonderful reception the city has given its honored guest," he said. "We have seen what the young prince is made of and we know that he is no tin soldier."

There was a cheer of agreement from the crowd that filled the Aldermanic Chambers at this sentiment. There was another cheer when Mr. Wanamaker produced a great silk flag and presented it to the prince.

Owing to the inability of Governor Smith to be present the state was represented by Secretary of State Francis M. Hugo. Addressing the prince, he said:

"Speaking for the Governor of the State of New York and, through him, for the people of this largest American commonwealth, I have the honor to bid your royal highness a cordial welcome and to offer you during your stay here the hospitality of the Empire State of the United States."

State's Part in War

"Nothing in the past century and a quarter has so tended to accentuate the bonds of sympathy and mutual interest that unite our kindred peoples as the recent world conflict, the anniversary of whose successful termination we jointly celebrated but a week ago, on Armistice Day. To this struggle for the triumph of our Anglo-Saxon liberties the State of New York was privileged to contribute 425,000 men, equivalent of twenty-eight British divisions, and our own New York National Guard, the 27th Division, had the honor of serving with your gallant British legions in Northern France, in the common cause of humanity, resulting in the glorious victory of right over might."

"We welcome you as a comrade in arms, you who have but recently shared the dangers and trials of the Western battle front with the general subalterns and doughboys of representing the navy; Major General H. K. Bethell, military attaché of the British Embassy; his aid, D. E. Wallace; Major General David Shanks, Major General John F. O'Ryan and James G. Cannon, Commissioner of Finance, representing Jersey City.

Much to the surprise of many who had gone to see him, the Prince did not make a speech before leaving Jersey City. On many occasions in Canada he consented to speak a few words to those around him after he had received a guard of honor, but in this case, perhaps realizing his day was well filled and that he had no time to spare, he quickly turned to Mr. Wanamaker after looking at each soldier in the unit and greeted him as he was ready to leave.

The party, now grown to perhaps one hundred with the addition of two score photographers, men and motion picture opera-with pretty girls and shooting men. Automobiles were parked for blocks in every direction. The crowds that had gathered there rivalled those attending the reception of General Pershing and Marshal Joffre, and there was almost quiet for the moment when the barge shoved alongside the police float and the crowd awaited their first view of the Prince of Wales.

He walked the plank at the head of the float of welcomers, with Mr. Wanamaker close behind him. He was smiling, and his smart uniform fairly sparkled in the sunlight. He had proceeded only into full view, luckily, when the band from Governor's Island started "God Save the King." It is an inspiring thing to behold the Prince of Wales "snapping into it," as they say in the army, when he hears that great tune. He simply jumps into it. It was just as inspiring yesterday from the point of view of the American soldier or ex-soldier, to see the twist of his hand as he came to salute for "The Star Spangled Banner."
